RAGGED FIELDING CAUSES DEFEAT

Carolina Miscues, and Princeton Takes Advantage of Every Wobble Made.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Greensboro, N. C., March 19.—Prince-ton defeated North Carolina 9 to 3 today. Loose field work by the Tarheel boys enabled the "Tigers" to run up the score, notwithstanding Aycock, Carolina's young pitcher, kept hits well scattered, and went the full game, yielding but six safeties. The Prince-ton nine played a close game in the field and on the offensive quickly took the advantages offered by misplays of the opposing club.

Wood, who opened for Princeton, went five innings, yielding three hits for one run. Rodgers followed and was wild. In the seventh Carolina bunched three hits for two runs, and Copeland was substituted. He went the remaining two innings with one

Rain Prevents Game.

Fayetteville, N. C., March 19.—Rain again prevented the game between the Phillies and the Baltimore team that was scheduled for to-day. Apparently giving up all hope of getting a game here, the Orioles and Phillies will leave to-morrow for Wilmington, N. C., where they have a game booked for the afternoon.

H. H. Barker went over the course at the Country Club with the writer a few days ago in reference to a few suggestions that were made to him in regards to lengthening the course and placing a few traps. Mr. Barker is one of the best golf course architects in the States. His praise of our course was quite noteworthy, and it was with great pleasure to hear from him what other golfers from different parts of the course, in regard to lengthening the course and it is now is a little course, he made were to add a few yards more to move the fifth tee back to the club terrace and the twelfth tee back to the club terrace and the twelfth tee back to the club terrace and the twelfth tee back to the club terrace as it is now is a little.

ception of wildness Aycock was in fine form, errors, figuring in all of Princeton's runs.

Pendleton, Princeton's big centre-fielder, was the one particular star of the day. In three credited times at bat he drove out a double and two singles. He handled two hard chances in the field and by a quick relay throw cut off a runner at third. Reed and Edwards put up a good game at short, and Carter's work behind the bat was of a brilliant order. Princeton plays Trinity here to-morrow. The score:

Grantland Rice, commenting on the feats of Messrs. Marquard, Johnson and Wood, in winning long strings of consecutive games, the Rube stlcking up nineteen and Joe and Walter sixteen each, remarks, with more reason than elocated the bric-a-brac of the game, but that what really counts is the mark made by Jack Chesbro in 1904, when he finished the season with a string of forty-three victories, the record for all time. Neither late that height. They filled the calcium and sat in the white lights, but when the fount up is made it is clearly evident that Chesbro was more valuable to Clark club. Grantland closes his little piece with this epic: "If the stars of the rifle pit care for a real target to blaze at this summer, let them open fire upon Chestory in the country of the country of the stars of the rifle pit care for a real target to blaze at this summer, let them open fire upon Chestory in the country of the country of

It's great to be old Joey Wood, To have Rube Marquard's style, And Johnson, too, is going good Up in the major pile.

But listen to this chirping friend While boasting of their spree— Jack Chesbro, back in 1904 Brought home some forty-three.

Which shows that records come and go And fade and fall away. Heroes are wanted in the big show, And Chesbro-he's had his day.

Just as the major leaguers are lifting their tents and preparing to steal away from the tortuous scenes of the pre-season conditioning period, starting on the long northward trail, the tollers in the bushes are only beginning to put in an appearance. Less fortunate than their more prosperous brothers of Swatland, they will not be met by trainers, whose duty it is to swath them in bandages, study their aches and pains, and in a general sort of way, overhaul them from every angle; no bonesetters follow them around to mend aching ligaments or plant splints on tired arms. As we lamp the reports from the training quarters and are confronted with the remarkable array of talent in camp, running all the way from bat boys to dentists, we wonder not that these heroes of the grassed enclosure show midseason form in March.

The busher realizes all this, but the fan in the minor circuits, less fore-bearing, realizes only that he is paying his shekels to see baseball, nor considers that these bushers, during the exhibition period, are measuring strength with the very flower of baseball products and hothouse-bred plants, at that. It is not overly comfortable for the aspiring youngsters to hear anathema hurled at their heads when the standard of comparion is a Ty Cobb, a Tris Speaker, a Walter Johnson, or a Clyde Milan. Right here and now, we plead for leniency on the part of the fan. And with this plea we made a promise. When the Virginia League starts its pennant march, if the Colts fail to measure up to the standard set by the remainder of the league, we shall be the first to call attention to the laxness of the management. But until that time comes, let's bear and forebear. It is not an unreasonable request. In fairness Steve Griffin should not be criticized until his club kicks away games, or boots the leather to all four corners, or displays evidence of a marble quarry, or a spine of jelly, against the clubs in the Virginia League. That's the real test of the Richmond club, and the only test upon which it should be judged.

on the part of the fan. And with his plea we made a promise. When the Virginia League starts its pennant march, if the Colts fail to measure up to the standard set by the remainder of the league, we shall be the first to call attention. The color of the league starts its pennant march, if the Colts fail to measure up to the standard set by the remainder of the league, we shall be the first to call attention. During an off moment, Steve let it be known that he wanted a club with aggressiveness for this season. "They's got to get in there and fight," said steve, and the words whistled through clenched teeth. "If there's a laggard developed, he'll find carfare waiting for him when he gets to the clubhouse. They've got to be aggressive, to get the jump on the other fellow, to take advantage of every second and beat the opposition to the guess. Fleet of hoof and quick with the thinkery—that's my motto, and it's going to rule the ranch, or there'll be another ruler, and I'm not ready to quit yet by long odds." or there'll be another ruler, and I'm not ready to quit yet by long odds."

Steve is also very firm in announcing that it's got to be a shotproof alibit to relieve any man from not living up to the rules established. "They can't hand any of the phony stuff to me. I'm out there to work, and they've got to follow the pace or listen to the rattling of the cans. A daily conference is part of my scheme. Every man will be drilled in the signals, and if any signal misses fire, the fellow to blame must answer for it. And they've got to keep off the umpire. If there's got to be a strong arm guy on the club, I am going to be it. I wont stand for having a ball game lost by some hot-headed youngster bawling out the umps. That's part of my job, and I'm going to look after it. If they can't listen to what I say, it's back to the quarry, making little one out of big ones for them, and that goes," concluded the ruling spirit of Coltville.

Walter Buckner broke his record by negotiating the 18-hole in 86. He is highly clated over the fact that he can play such good golf, and is seriously thinking of making good that promise he made some time ago about paying one dollar a yard for a 200-yard drive, providing he could get the 200 yards eight times out of ten.

Busch is having more than his share of troubles with hold-outs, and strange to say, the hold-outs are the men who can least help him. Simmons and Howedell, only average players, are calling for more money. We do not know what they received last season, but what ever it was they could stand a cut, and still be well paid. Spencer is also in the list, but Spencer will be of no value to any club until he finds some way to dissolve that lump of concrete he carries on his shoulders. Helnie, if this is all his trouble, has little cause to worry.

GREATER RICHMOND BOWLING TOURNEY

Bloomberg and Butler. Wiley and Healey. P. M. Singles: Wiley.

The bowling on the eighth night of the Richmond Tournament was of high order, and interest was at fever heat. The Cook Printing Company and the Richmond Lunch teams were the first to take the drives, and they furnished good amusement for the big crowd present. The Cook Printing Company went into first place in the Class A division.

Several changes were also made in the double events. Bailey and Rowsey now occupy second place in the doubles, pushing Graves and Sutterlin down a peg, while Wade and Blair went ahead of Schmitz and Overmann. Delaney and Quarles made a fine showing in the Class B events, and finished well in the standing. McCurdy and Punivant also made a big hit for newcomers, and finished in sixth place in their class.
